

school radio and the National Curriculum in England

This document outlines how School Radio can help you to deliver the National Curriculum in England by meeting several statutory aims and recommended guidelines across multiple core and foundation subjects relating to key stages 1, 2 and 3.

These have been broken down by subject with direct reference to the relevant sections of the new National Curriculum that will be fully employed across all subjects in England by the end of the 2014/15 academic year.

The aim of this document is to demonstrate how a School Radio system can help your school to meet the relevant criteria within the National Curriculum in a creative, engaging and fun way that will benefit the whole school community.

“Pupils should learn to justify ideas with reasons; ask questions to check understanding; develop vocabulary and build knowledge; negotiate; evaluate and build on the ideas of others; and select the appropriate register for effective communication” – The National Curriculum – 6.2 Spoken Language (p11)

English

What the curriculum says:

“Pupils should be taught to speak clearly and convey ideas confidently using Standard English. They should learn to justify ideas with reasons; ask questions to check understanding; develop vocabulary and build knowledge; negotiate; evaluate and build on the ideas of others; and select the appropriate register for effective communication.”

“Listening to, discussing and expressing views about a wide range of contemporary and classic poetry, stories and non-fiction at a level beyond that at which they can read independently”

How we can help:

A question and answer session or debate are popular, tried and tested forms of a radio show. Creating this environment for students around the subject of a book report, assessment of a historical event, ethics and morality and other topics that arise from lessons allows students to demonstrate their own understanding of a topic as well as learn from their peer’s assessment.

What the curriculum says:

“Teachers should develop pupils’ spoken language, reading, writing and vocabulary as integral aspects of the teaching of every subject.”

How we can help:

In producing a radio show for an audience the emphasis is primarily on language in all its forms. From writing and reading a script to talking to co-presenters, School Radio helps to develop language as a student’s primary tool.

Maths

What the curriculum says:

“Pupils should be taught to apply arithmetic fluently to problems, understand and use measures, make estimates and sense check their work.”

How we can help:

Timing and estimating are two of the essential skills used to produce a fluent and entertaining radio show. By doing this, students will gain a thorough understanding of numbers and their practical use through a fun and engaging process.

Inclusion

What the curriculum says:

“A wide range of pupils have special educational needs, many of whom also have disabilities. Lessons should be planned to ensure that there are no barriers to every pupil achieving.”

How we can help:

School Radio’s AR1 is the world’s most accessible radio studio and has been developed in conjunction with several special schools from around the UK to increase accessibility for presenters with physical disabilities.

As a tool, radio has a strong track record of empowering people with both SEN and physical disabilities. Using the AR1 helps to reduce the barriers and empower students with disabilities.

History

What the curriculum says:

“The writing they do should include narratives, explanations, descriptions, comparisons, summaries and evaluations.”

How we can help:

A class production of a radio history drama can be an effective way of meeting the aforementioned disciplines. At the script development stage, the story can be directed so that characters appropriately address narrative, explanation, description, comparison, summary and evaluation. An exercise like this also involves all students and ensures that everyone is working on their individual roles to contribute to the completed task.

What the curriculum says:

“Teachers should develop vocabulary actively, building systematically on pupils’ current knowledge. “

How we can help:

School Radio can be an effective review tool as it allows presenters to record their output and subject it to both self and peer review.

Drama*What the curriculum says:

“All pupils should be enabled to participate in and gain knowledge, skills and understanding associated with the artistic practice of drama.”

“They should have opportunities to improvise, devise and script drama for one another and a range of audiences”

How we can help:

Radio dramas are one of the oldest, most successful and best-loved forms of entertainment. By re-creating these students learn the role of drama, develop the associated skills and learn how to write a script. It also allows for a group review of the spoken word and provides a lasting reference, so students & teachers can measure the progress being made by referring to previous recordings.

R.E*What the curriculum says:

“It is essential that, by the end of their primary education, all pupils are able to read fluently, and with confidence”

How we can help:

Presenting a radio show of any description to peers helps to build a student’s confidence and leads to more fluent and proficient reading. By performing topic bulletins or discussing different religions and customs within a show also helps students to gain an understanding of different cultures and the world around them.
